Among the Important questions which should come up for legislabe called, there is none that probably demands more immediate attention than that of devising some means of relief for the crowded docket of our Supreme court. The amid the rush of other business toward the remedying of what has been for many years an urgent and day and drafted a series of resolu tions in the nature of an appeal to an extra session of that body. This the part of the members of the Carthage bar, and will meet with a hearty response from, not only all the other bars in the State, but from the citizens in general.

This matter is one which directly concerns the public. It matters not whether a man is directly connected with a law-suit now or not, still, as a citizen of the State, he has a personal interest in the speedy decision of litigation.

Under the present overcrowded condition of the docket, a case that goes up now cannot possibly be reached inside of three or four years This is not the fault of our present Supreme court for they are working | cal purposes hard and assiduously; but cases accumulate much faster than they can dispose of them. No matter how a case of any importance is now decided in the lower courts, either one side or the other is sure to appeal to the supreme court, and thus hunup in law, thereby working great
